

Raylene Harvey, EA

Tax Partner

“I know that my clients are squarely focused on the success of their operations.”

I have been working in the accounting and tax field since the mid-1980's, starting in private industry before finding my way to public accounting. I later became a partner with McFarlane, Cazale & Associates in San Jose, which merged with Johanson & Yau in 2019.

I contribute leadership and concentrate my skills across a wide range of tax and bookkeeping services for clients in real estate and various small business sectors. My professional passion lies in a drive to provide consulting services to clients who need assistance with simple to complex or unique tax and accounting needs, in order to allow them to focus on growing healthy businesses.

A San Jose native, outside of work, I enjoy bike riding, travel, and spending time with family, including my three young grandchildren.
